

THE NEWS.

The APPEAL is the only paper in Carson publishing the full report of the preliminary examination of John T. Jones, charged with a shortage in the Mint.

Our contemporaries have decided that anything that tends to show that the shortage occurred during the Republican administration is not a good thing to publish and so content themselves with saying that nothing of importance is taking place.

The testimony so far is not exactly pleasant reading for those who had a theory that the Silver party stole the bullion. It will be published in full in the APPEAL every morning and if the investigation should take a turn and show that Silver men had been robbing the Government, the APPEAL will publish every line of it. The APPEAL receives a certain amount of money every week from the people of Carson to publish the news of the day and it will publish the same irrespective of anybody.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries.

In order that the readers of the APPEAL may not lose any news about the Mint investigation we report the news published by our local and esteemed contemporaries in addition to what is printed in the APPEAL columns, in order that the public may get it all.

The Tribune on Tuesday had the following:

Reports from the preliminary examination are about as meagre as is possible for them to be.

The entire day was taken up with the examination of Inspector Mason and at the present rate of progress will take several days.

Carson is full of reporters who thought to get news from the examination but all will be disappointed. One local reporter attempted to sneak in the room above the Court room in the hopes of overhearing, but was unsuccessful.

The News of yesterday gave out the following information:

The preliminary examination of John T. Jones, who is accused of being able to account for the Mint shortage, was begun before U. S. Commissioner Edwards yesterday, but as the examination is not public we are unable to give any particulars. It is probable that the examination will consume considerable time, and the general opinion is that the wrong man has been arrested.

Unfair Identification.

If newspaper reports are true the police methods of identifying Durrant are unfair. A man who says he has seen Durrant at some particular place calls to identify him.

"All right," says the police, "We'll bring him up here and you can take a look at him."

Durrant is brought up and the man, expecting Durrant, says at once:

"Oh yes that's him."

Now suppose they brought up half a dozen men, and said to the caller:

"What one did you see?"

An identification would mean something, and if the witness failed to pick him out, his testimony would go for what it is worth.

The dull minded President is hot at J. Sterling Morton because he has spoken on the financial question, and he has criticised his action. Cleveland has good reasons to be annoyed while people contrast the keen and original utterances of Morton—who is a man of brains—with the stupid floundering of the administration on the financial question. Morton like his boss is on the wrong side of the fence, but the showing he makes puts Cleveland in the back ground and he President is virtually grunting and disgruntled.

Winnemucca is about to receive a hard blow. The crews of the S. P. train will no longer be changed at that place, and will run from Wadsworth to Carlin. This is a part of the S. P. retrenchment and will necessitate the removal from Winnemucca of many of the train men who now live there and who own their own home.

The thieving ring at Carson have finally succeeded in closing the Mint. It is now in order for them to shed crocodile tears over the result of their work and curse the Administration for putting a stop to their thievery. No honest man will blame the Government for closing up a robber's roost.—Independent.

Another woman is suing Lucky Baldwin for breach of promise and seduction. Baldwin answers that he has been married for some years and the woman ought to have known better than trust him, on any promise to marry her. Baldwin for once is dead right.
